COLOR THIS PICTURE AND YOU CAN WIN

THE CASH ($1,000.00) AND THE CAR, TOO!

It's easy to win in this new DELL COMICS Contest. All ages can enter. Just color in the picture at the right. The car is a Thunderbird, Jr. (Retail at $540.00). It's an exact copy of the famous Ford Thunderbird. 5' 10" long, the T-Bird Jr. is battery run and goes up to 10 miles per hour. Has a real horn, lights and a trunk, too. And there's $1,000.00 in coins and bills in the car. Enough money to treat Mom and Dad, Brother, Sister, and yourself.

The boys and girls coloring this picture in the most original, most beautiful way win a prize. Color, color, color now. Enter as many times as you wish.

YOU'VE GOT 1111 CHANCES TO WIN —

TIT for TAT

Little Quacker was swimming peacefully in his pond when, suddenly, he was startled by a splash in the water behind him.

"Waki!" he quacked anxiously. "A human person is invading my happy home. There's no telling what he might do, so I'd better scream out of here, on the double."

Little Quacker scrambled to the shore and started to waddle away.

The splash had been made by a boy who had decided to use the duck pond as a swimming hole. The boy saw Little Quacker and began to chase him. The duckling wriggled through a clump of bushes and fled.

From over his shoulder, Little Quacker saw the boy pick up what looked like a spear and begin throwing it into the water.

"Oh, no!" groaned Little Quacker. "He's spear fishing, too! Whatever will become of all my finny fish friends?"

Little Quacker sighed with dismay as he lingered by the shore. "I've got to think of a way to get rid of that meany before he hurts one of my friends. Maybe some of my woodland pals can help me out."

But as Little Quacker located his friends and explained his troubles, the birds, the squirrels, and the turtles shrugged one by one and turned away.

"There's nothing we can do against a human person," they each said.

"But he's a danger to all of us as long as he stays around," Little Quacker pleaded earnestly. "How do you know that he won't take it into his head to start hunting one of you once he comes out of the water?"

"That's true," one of the turtles frowned thoughtfully. "and if he gets to like swimming in the pond, he may come back again and again. We'll never be able to go near the place."

As Little Quacker and his friends fretted mournfully, they heard the sound of a falling tree in the nearby woods. "Hmm," Little Quacker said, "the beavers are busy cutting trees, and that gives me an idea. Maybe we can get rid of that obstacle in the pond by putting a few obstacles in there ourselves."

The determined little duckling hastily explained his plan. "Help me find some branches and logs which have been snagged by rocks in the water upstream," he urged. "We'll pry them loose and float them down to the pond until it's so thick the swimmer won't have room to move around in there any more."

"Say," one of the turtles croaked, "that might work at that. But we'd better be mighty quick about it, before he spears one of our underwater friends!"

The woodland animals went to work immediately. Tugging and pulling mightily, they finally managed to set free a great number of snagged branches and logs.

Little Quacker and his friends guided their obstacles downstream and into the pond.

"Look!" one of the turtles croaked. "The swimmer is coming out of the water. He's leaving! Your plan worked, and now we'll be safe once again!"

"Waki!" Little Quacker panted with relief. "I see all our fish friends are still safe, too. Well, come on gang," he added. "Let's go and get the beavers now."

"What for?" a turtle inquired.

"Why, I think they'll be more than delighted to take all these branches and logs out of here for us," the fuzzy duckling explained. "It'll save them the trouble of having to cut down trees for their dams. I sure don't feel like moving all this stuff again myself," he sighed wearily. "I've had enough obstacles in my path for one day."
